Trusted for more than two decades for its educational excellence, this international conference brings together more than 400 members of the multidisciplinary lymphoma clinical team including oncologists, hematologists, pathologists, clinical scientists, nurse practitioners, physician assistants, nurses, and pharmacists. A full complement of research and clinical case presentations, symposiums, posters, and exhibits make this conference one of the largest gatherings of clinicians and researchers specializing in the areas of lymphoma and transplantation.

The 2018 conference will include scientific sessions Monday through Friday, and two-hour symposiums throughout the conference.

Conference Objectives

At the conclusion of the conference, the attendee should be better able to:

2. Formulate evidence-based management strategies for the optimal management of patients with lymphoma, leukemia and myeloma, inclusive of multi-modality therapies and maintenance-based regimens
3. Analyze underlying molecular and cytogenetic abnormalities contributing to hematologic malignancies and their impact on diagnosis, prognosis, and therapeutic approaches
4. Evaluate the optimal patient selection, timing, and regimen for stem cell transplant and chimeric antigen receptor (CAR-T) cell therapy for patients with lymphoma
5. Personalize the treatment of hematologic malignancies based upon patient and disease-specific characteristics, and manage treatment-related adverse effects appropriately
6. Provide accurate and appropriate counsel as part of the treatment plan
7. Review factors that impact patient selection, availability, and enrollment into clinical trials examining novel agents under investigation in patients with lymphoma, leukemia, and myeloma
