Focus on Users

- Improved facilities in response to student recommendations, campus wellness initiatives, and donor requests:
 - Designated seventh floor as “quiet study” zone
 - Improved ambiance of study rooms
 - Added items to the Linder Lounge
 - Distributed trash and recycle bins throughout the library
 - Removed artwork from student study rooms
 - Added hand sanitizer stations
 - Improved signage
- As part of the library’s strategic planning process, we aimed to answer questions about how we can best serve the near-future library and information needs of our communities of users. Librarians interviewed 21 people representing six groups in the academic medical center community: faculty, students, post-docs, clinicians, support staff, and patient representatives. Interview questions elicited storytelling in the areas of motivation, purpose, priorities, approaches to collaboration, information-seeking behaviors and barriers, perceptions of space and environment, technology interests, perceptions of libraries, and lifestyle. Based on transcripts and discussion of themes, librarians Emily Glenn and Christian Minter created personas to inform and encourage broad thinking about library products and services.
- Completed a usability study of the library’s website; improved the website and other resources based on feedback.
- Created a peer review process to improve the usability of our Research Guides.
- Our Education and Research Services Department improved several online tutorials.

Partnerships across Campus

- Faculty members Euem Osmera and Cindy Schmidt worked with E-Learning Program staff to add keywords to the e-gallery of teaching resources to improve search results for e-learning modules.

- Cindy Schmidt continues teaching Introduction to Drug Information, a credit course and lab, for the College of Pharmacy.
- Teri Hartman is the Inquiry and Research Coil Director for the new College of Medicine curriculum.
- Teri Hartman is co-director and Alissa Fial is secretary of the Education Technology Collaboration (ETC), an interest group of the UNMC Interprofessional Academy of Educators.
