Chris Sonne:

Vice President of Client Services at Wakefield Brunswick

Christopher is an accomplished Emergency Management and Business Continuity professional, known for his program development experience in the public and private sectors. With nearly two decades of industry experience, Chris has advised and developed numerous business resiliency programs for clients across the United States. Before joining Wakefield Brunswick, Chris spent more than ten years leading consulting teams in support of local, state, regional, and national healthcare resiliency efforts. Prior to his work in consulting, Chris worked for nearly a decade at Advocate Lutheran General Hospital, an adult and pediatric Level I Trauma Center in the Chicagoland area. There, he gained clinical experience in the Emergency Department and spent several years working within the Nursing Administration Office. Throughout his tenure, Chris proved instrumental in the development of the facility's Emergency Management Program. In 2011 he earned certification as a Homeland Security Exercise and Evaluation Program (HSEEP) instructor through FEMA's Emergency Management Institute (EMI).
