

Citation Management with EndNote

November 12, 2024 | 11 am | MCPH 3013 & Zoom

Jess King, MLIS
Assistant Professor
Education and Research Services
Librarian

Join us for a comprehensive presentation by our college's librarian on EndNote, a must-have tool for any researcher looking to streamline their research process. This session will cover everything you need to know about using EndNote to manage references effectively, from importing and organizing citations to integrating them seamlessly into your academic writing. You'll learn how to insert citations directly into Word documents, automatically format them in various citation styles like APA, MLA, or Chicago, and generate bibliographies with ease.

Designed for students and faculty alike, this workshop will be invaluable whether you're conducting complex research for your thesis or dissertation, or simply keeping track of sources for regular coursework. EndNote helps ensure accuracy in your citations, saves time by automating tedious formatting tasks, and allows you to focus more on writing and less on managing references. Whether you're new to EndNote or looking to optimize its use, this session will equip you with essential skills and strategies to enhance your research and writing productivity.
